Insights & Criteria

- Coastal and California Cities: California dominates the list, with several cities including Los Angeles, San Francisco, Oakland, San Diego, and Santa Rosa ranking highly due to studio saturation, teacher concentration, and frequent yoga-related searches^{[1] [2] [3]}.
- Wellness Hubs: New York City, Boulder, Austin, Denver, and Seattle are recognized for their strong yoga cultures, active populations, and abundant yoga instruction options^{[4] [1] [5]}.
- Growing in the Southeast & Southwest: Cities like Miami, Phoenix, Scottsdale, St. Petersburg, and Asheville show both high per-capita searches and rapid growth in studio openings^{[1] [2] [6] [7]}.
- Other Standouts: Washington, DC and Boston consistently appear in analyses thanks to their high density of studios per capita and a tech-savvy, wellness-oriented populace^{[4] [1]}.

Note: This list draws from national search and yoga industry analysis, combining factors like search volume, instructor job data, studio density, and media coverage of local yoga trends.
